Beth Perry Black, PhD, RN, is an associate professor of nursing at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She teaches a graduate course, Death, Dying, and Care of the Bereaved, for nursing and social work students, an undergraduate course on nursing inquiry and evidence-based practice, and two graduate writing courses. She has published numerous articles on perinatal loss, several monographs, and book chapters; and authored a book on professional nursing practice. Dr. Black has had National Institutes of Health (NIH) funding twice to study perinatal loss and palliative care and recently completed a study on reproductive loss in lesbian couples.

The author keeps it interesting with personal stories as well as relevant information, and doesn't just drone on and on about stuff you don't care about (all the time). Features some very interesting historical information as well. I liked that the author seemed very current and advocates for important issues in healthcare. For a textbook it was pretty good! Though I'm sure if you need this it is not by choice :)

Barely needed during school. In fact this was probably never once opened during my BSN. There is nothing new in this book that your instructors don't talk about but you're still required to know.

Required reading for class.

This book was very helpful and full of a lot of interesting information.

Book was in great condition and worked out well for my class. Thank you

This book was very helpful and detailed. It covered the most important areas and did prepare me for the TEAS V exam.

Best book in my whole BSN program! It is super helpful!!

This book was in excellent shape. Very easy to read.
