

The book was found

Who Was Lewis Carroll?

Synopsis

Meet the man who created Alice, the Mad Hatter, and Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum! Lewis Carroll is the pen name of Charles L. Dodgson, a mathematician and church deacon, who taught at Oxford University. He was inspired to write his best known works, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass, by one of the Dean's daughters, Alice Liddell. The books were hugely successful and brought Carroll wide acclaim, especially for the nonsense poems "Jabberwocky" and The Hunting of the Snark. Children and adults continue to be delighted by the fantasy of the Alice stories, which have been the basis of plays and movies since their publication in Victorian England during the 1860s and 1870s.

Book Information

Series: Who Was?

Paperback: 112 pages

Publisher: Penguin Workshop; Dgs edition (October 3, 2017)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0448488671

ISBN-13: 978-0448488677

Product Dimensions: 5.3 x 0.2 x 7.6 inches

Shipping Weight: 4.6 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: Be the first to review this item

Best Sellers Rank: #327,727 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #121 in Books > Children's Books > Biographies > Literary #146 in Books > Children's Books > Education & Reference > History > Europe #232 in Books > Children's Books > Geography & Cultures > Explore the World > Europe

Age Range: 8 - 12 years

Grade Level: 3 - 7

Customer Reviews

Pamela Pollack and Meg Belviso are authors of several books in this series, including Who Is George Lucas?, Who Was Alfred Hitchcock?, and Who Was Susan B. Anthony?

Who Was Lewis Carroll? On July 4, 1862, a small boat sailed down the Isis River – a part of the famous Thames – in Oxford, England. Three sisters, Lorina, Alice, and Edith Liddell, were enjoying a day on the water with family friends Robinson Duckworth and Charles Dodgson. The two men taught at Oxford University with Mr. Liddell, the girls' father. Charles Dodgson was like no other adult the girls knew. He was very smart. He taught math at the university. He loved to invent puzzles and games. He took dozens of photos of the girls dressed up in costumes with a very new invention: the camera. But best of all, Charles told great stories. He often made them up on the spot, taking ideas from real life and making them seem funny or magical. As he rowed the boat that day, Charles made up a story about a girl also named Alice who chased a white rabbit into its hole and fell into a strange, wonderful new world. In this world, many of the characters seemed a lot like the people in Alice Liddell's own life, only funnier. Everyone in the boat inspired a character in the story. A duck for Reverend Duckworth, an imaginary bird called a Lory for Lorina, and an Eaglet for Edith. Charles himself was represented by a Dodo. This was not too surprising because he had a slight stutter. Sometimes when he said his last name it came out Do-do-dodgson. Charles's friend Duckworth was amazed that Charles could make up such an enchanting story so quickly. Later that day, Alice wondered: Could Charles write the new story down so she could read it again and again? Charles sometimes wrote and published poetry and essays under a made-up name (called a pen name), Lewis Carroll. But he had never been asked to write a children's story. He promised Alice he would. The world is lucky that Alice Liddell asked for that favor! Because the story Charles wrote as Lewis Carroll became one of the most famous children's stories of all time: Alice's Adventures in Wonderland.

Chapter 1: Fun and Games

Charles Lutwidge Dodgson was born on January 27, 1832. His father was a country parson. Just like a priest, he was in charge of the local church. Charles's home life in Daresbury, England, was very religious. The family read the Bible and went to church often. When Charles was born, he already had two older sisters. Over time his parents would have eleven children in all, seven girls and four boys. Almost all of them had a stutter like Charles, who was also deaf in his right ear. Charles loved his life in Daresbury. His mother was very patient and kind. His brothers and sisters were a lot of fun. Charles was a curious boy who wanted to learn about the world. He climbed trees and played with frogs. His father taught him math, reading, and even how to speak Latin. One day when Charles was very young, he brought his father a book of advanced math equations and asked, "Please, explain." His father told him he was too young to understand such complicated things. Charles nodded and said, "But, please explain!" When Charles was eleven, his father moved the family to Saint Peter's Church in Croft, in the north of England. They moved into the Croft Rectory, a house especially for the parson and his family, in 1843. It was much bigger than the house in Daresbury, and stood across the street from the large stone church of Saint Peter. Charles's father built a real schoolhouse to replace the barn that had been used for lessons. Parson Dodgson taught the students himself. Life in the Dodgson home was centered on the family's strong faith. Family prayers were said in the morning and evening. On Sundays everyone read the Bible. Charles tried very hard to live up to what he thought God might want of him. But life was also a lot of fun. The Dodgson children all loved to play games, and Charles was especially good at coming up with exciting things to do. He put on puppet shows in a theater he built himself. He performed magic tricks. He acted out plays and stories. He drew funny pictures. Charles was so fascinated by the big train that ran near Croft, he even built his own version out of a wheelbarrow and a barrel. Then he set up areas in the garden that stood for different stations. He drove his brothers and sisters from station to station, stopping for snacks at each one. To get on the train, they had to buy a ticket. Charles made up a strict timetable for the train and anyone who broke the rules—say, by jumping out of the train while it was moving—was put in jail. Charles and his siblings loved their new home so much that they wanted to leave parts of themselves in the home forever. So one day they lifted up some of the floorboards to hide some small treasures underneath—a handkerchief, a thimble, a glove. Charles added a block of wood. On it he had written: "And we'll wander through the wide world and chase the buffalo." Charles might have been happy to play with his brothers and sisters forever. But when he was twelve, it was time for him to begin his formal education. Charles was going away to school.

Download to continue reading...

CS Lewis: The Greatest Lessons through the Inspiring Life of CS Lewis (CS Lewis Biography, CS Lewis Mere Christianity, CS Lewis The Screwtape Letters) Lewis Carroll: The Complete Novels + A Biography of the Author (The Greatest Writers of All Time) Coloring Books for Grownups Alice In Wonderland: Vintage Coloring Books for Adults - Art & Quotes Reimagined from Lewis Carroll's Original Alice in Wonderland Alice's Wonderland: A Visual Journey through Lewis Carroll's Mad, Mad World Who Was Lewis Carroll? Crochet Stories: Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland The Works of Lewis Carroll Lewis Carroll's Jabberwocky: A Book of Brilliant Dioramas The Mathematical Recreations of Lewis Carroll: Pillow Problems and a Tangled Tale (Dover Recreational Math) Lewis Carroll's Puzzles in Wonderland Lewis Carroll, Anthology with images The Journals of Lewis and Clark (Lewis & Clark Expedition) Lewis and Clark among the Indians (Bicentennial Edition) (Lewis & Clark Expedition) Undaunted Courage: Meriwether Lewis, Thomas Jefferson and the Opening of the American West: Meriwether Lewis Thomas Jefferson and the Opening The C.S. Lewis Recordings:

The Four Loves & C.S. Lewis Speaks His Mind Three New York Composers: The Collected Works of Lewis Edson, Lewis Edson Jr, and Nathaniel Billings (Music of the New American Nation: Sacred Music from 1780 to 1820) The Suppressed History of America: The Murder of Meriwether Lewis and the Mysterious Discoveries of the Lewis and Clark Expedition Into Words: The Selected Writings of Carroll Dunham Catholics in America: Religious Identity and Cultural Assimilation from John Carroll to Flannery O'Connor Miss Moore Thought Otherwise: How Anne Carroll Moore Created Libraries for Children

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help